

Rudi Rozman

Professor of Management and Organization at the Faculty of Economics, University of Ljubljana, Slovenia

Rudi Rozman is Professor of Management and Organization at University of Ljubljana, Faculty of Economics. His main areas of interest in the last years are theory of organization, corporate governance, project management and knowledge management. He is the author or co-author of 6 books and over 100 articles and papers. He is responsible for specialization programs in Management and Project Management and a joint international MBA program.

After having finished the undergraduate and MBA program at University of Ljubljana he was employed in Slovenian Steelworks Corporation at different specialist's and managerial positions. He joined University of Ljubljana, Faculty of Economics in 1990 after the defense of the doctoral dissertation. He lectured Operations Management, Business Economics, Business Analysis, Management, Project Management, Theory of Organization and Analysis and Design of Organization. Within these fields he made also the research, mentoring, consultation, lecturing and organizing seminars and workshops.

He participated and took part in different conferences in Corporate Planning, Business and Organizational Analysis and Project Management in Slovenia and abroad. He was the head of organizing and program committee for EGOS 2004 in Ljubljana and participating at quite some EGOS Colloquia and EURAM conferences.

He is active member of some professional associations and member of some editorial boards.